You have an opportunity to influence energy efficiency funding! Share your thoughts to measure the success of equity programs.

1) What matters most when judging if a program is equitable? Rank your options.

Rank 1 – 3	Options
	Customer barriers: Provide the right help to ensure equity customers can participate
	Community engagement: Engage with equity customers on program design to ensure programs address their needs
	Customer participation: Serve as many equity customers as possible

2) Do these program outcomes reflect equitable access? Use the scale to assess the following:

How much money is spent in a specific region or equity community	Money given directly to people who qualify for equity programs (example: rebates)	Potential bill savings for participants	How long savings are expected to last in years	Additional benefits such as better indoor air quality and comfort
What influenced your answers? Do any outcomes stand out?

3) Do these program outcomes reflect equitable access? Use the scale to assess the following:

Number of equity participants served	Ratio of equity participants served	Reaching many different groups of people	Location of participants
What influenced your answers? Do any outcomes stand out?

4) In one word or short phrase, what makes community engagement meaningful?

5) In one word or short phrase, what does equitable access mean to you?
